Course Structure

The Humanities - History course gives learners access to personalised learning, allowing them to combine units that are suitable for their individual needs. Pupils will study -

'A British Society in the Past'

This unit helps learners to understand the key features that affected British lives in the past. This will be taught through a study of short periods of British history. In particular learners will be taught about similarities and differences between past and present and the use of historical sources.

'A Non-British Society in the Past'

This unit will help learners to understand the key features that affected people's lives in the past. This will be through a study of a short period of non-British history focusing on a specific society. In particular, learners will be taught about similarities and difference between past and present and the use of historical sources.

'Looking at your History'

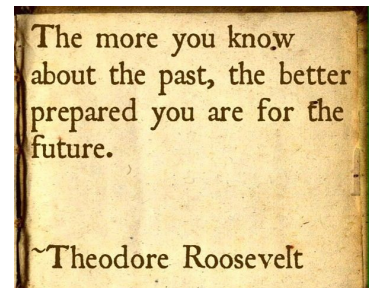

In this unit, learners will study historical issues of local interest and importance.

'People and Protest'

This unit will enable learners to gain knowledge of the reasons why people sometimes resort to protest, the different methods used to protest and whether protest is ever successful.

'Persecution of People'

Learners will gain knowledge and understanding of how and why people have been persecuted. This can be done through a study of historical and contemporary events.
