

Evaluations in Geographical Enquiries

Think about your research for your Geography NEA and consider the following questions:

Can you identify any problems with your data collection methods?

Did you collect the correct information to answer the research question?

What are the limitations of the data you collected?

Can you suggest other data that might be useful?

To what extent were your conclusions reliable?

How valid are your results?

Was your sample size big enough? Why is this important?